Polluted Waterworks

Adventure Prompt

Once long ago the city above this waterworks was lush and beautiful, dotted with parks and clear drinking fountains. There was a refreshing chill in the air with just enough warmth to keep one comfortable. It truly felt like paradise for all those who lived there, but mounds of rubbish and broken pots were building up beyond its walls.

One day, the ground began shaking violently, as it had done every so often. But this time a vengeful nature spirit emerged from the earth, poisoning the waterways and turning the parks and greenery against the city people. She claimed the city had grown like a plague upon her lands, and that she would do whatever she could to snuff it out.

Animals invaded the buildings of those who lived there, and the city soon became overgrown with strange plants. Many fled, and those who remain live under the constant threat of danger and conflict from predatory creatures and carnivorous plants.

Those who remain need access to fresh water, and they beg you to cleanse the polluted waterworks beneath the city and free them of this evil.
